A gen ral conflagration was in progress when our forces left on their pours.

Many deserters came to our lines, who report hat two regiments of Missourions, a few days ago, Macked their arms, crossed the river and went home. And a r n giment of Missourians selt a short time after, taking their arms with them. Two regimen s of Texans also stacked their sims and started for home. A regiment of cavalry was sent in pursuit, but instead of arresting, joined the runaways. Everything go s to show that the rotel army of the Trans-Missesuppi is completely disorganized. The Arran as river is at a bootable stage, and the country bordering its banks from a point twenty-five mies below Van Buren to Little Rock is well provided with forage and food for an army. Our troops are to spiemful spirits, having accomplished this most during and successful raid without losing a single life.

The Iron-Clads in Motion - Proops Going WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. - Dispatch to the Evening Post. ]-A dispatch from Fortress Monroe, yesterday, states that there has been an unusual stir among the shipping there for some days past, and particularly the armadillos. The Montauk, the Passaic, the Monitor and he Galena are off in some direction-Boston harbor, perhaps; or Halifax. Great interest prevails to learn what they would be at, the monsters!

Missouri Legislature in Favor of Emancipatien. JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 30 .- Both Houses of the Legislature were completely organized today, by the election of the emancipation candidutes. There seems to be a general feeling that Congress should lead off in the emancipation movement, and there is no doubt that a prompt and liberal tender of compensation would greatly facilitate the emancipation measures in the Legisla ure. There is a strong prospect that the Senatorial question will be disposed of this week. Under the constitution of this State a simple Shority only is required to pass any bill over & Governor's veto.

PAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30 .- Wells, Fargo & o. will charge tas per cent for shipping gold A New York by the next steamer. It is generally anticipated that the treasure shipment for New York will be exceedingly light, and that the bulk soins farward will so by the British stramer from Aspinwall.

Yesterday Major Gen. Burnside testified in the Porter court martial. He stated that in Adrust las Gen. Porter was under his command, with (among others) orders to protect the line of the Rappahannock and its fords, and that Gen. Porter was requested and airected to send him, by telegraph or otherwise, what information he could concerning the milmary stations of Virginia at that time, and that he frequently received from Gen. In relation to General Porter and myself. our feelings toward each other were such that I did not consider it necessary for his language to be formal, nor to give him a formal order for anything I wished him to do. I was temporarily in command at that point, and the forces were sent to me, and although I dld not make the orders formal, their spirit was carried out by every officer under my command. So informal were they that I may have sent mesages to Gen. Porter of which I have not, perlars, kept any copi s. Question. From your observations of Gen.

patches were received was between the 36th snd 19th of August last, and whether any of them excited in your mind an apprehension that Gen. Percer might not be in hund to do his whose duty as a subordinate under the commond of Gen. Pape ! Answer. I received no such impression from the dispatches. I saw in Gen. Porter's dis-

Porter and I hough I have beard him make use of very ind servet language, there was nothing in what he said that made me feel for one moneut that he would not do his duty. I received the wiegraphic con munications through Gen. Porter trem Gen. Pope. The President of the United States came to the telegraph office every morning at 7's o'clock, requesting of use any information that I might have to send. I did not teel justified in withholding any information. from him that would give him a correct anpression of what was going on in that line. Gen. Halleck and Gen. McClellan each received

I cannot locate the moment that ! ever heard him verbally express that lack of on fidence. It is altogether likely that he did express that opinion verbally; it was the general expression. The first written disputch was from Catlett's Station, when a large portion of the wagons were carried to the rear. I am not prepared to say that Gen. Porur did not express such opinions at Falmouth, but I cannot ocure the time. No dispatches that I received that kind on the Chickshoming.

of the Army of the Potomac a great indisposition to withdraw from the Peninsula, and do you not think that this indisposition went far to discipline those officers to co-operate heartily with General Pepe ! Answer. I do not think that these had anvthing to do with it. Two-thirds of the army of the Potomac that I met on James river were fevorable to withdrawing the army. Threefourths of the general officers that I met decided to the same effect. An informal council board decided the same way, and I was also of that opinion. When I came down on the steamer from Harrison's Landing, all the officers I saw argued, as a necessity, the withdrawal of the army from the Peniasula.

After Gen. Porter had reported for duty to Gen. Pope, the wieness fild not consider it proper to give the former an order as his superior officer, but he would not hesitate to make suggestions. Nor did he think it improper to ask Gen. Porter for information of the state of the army during the whole period after he left witness. He was quite satisfied too that all the information contained in the telegram in relation to the state of the army under Geh. Pore was correct. Being further questioned in regard to Gen. Porter, he stated that he knew that he (Porter) had immediately obeyed the order requiring him to join forces with Gen. Pope, but whether he had used efforts beyond the dictates of duty to do so, he was not aware. He spoke also of an incident that occurred on the banks of the Chickahominy, in which Gen. Porter had displayed foresight. Whilst on the point of crossing that stream the wagon trains very much impeded the movements of the troops; Porter had ordered the wagons to pass on beyond, and in doing so was compelled to change the position of his corps. McClellan was at first displeased with this manceuvie, but after the army had crossed, fully assented to its judiciousness... Brig. Gen. Butterfield, of Porter's corps, was next sworp. He said he was present when the order from Gen. Pope arrived, directing Porter to march at one o clock a. m., on the win of August. Gen. Porter, he said, having sent out his rids to explore the road, was convinced, by their report, of the impracticability of starting before day break, and decided accordingly.
